How to set up Expanded Maternity Leave?

1. Click on Settings / Leaves / Maternity Benefits. A B C

2. The three maternity benefit types are made available: (i) 105 Days Maternity Benefit, (ii) 120 Days Maternity Benefit for Solo Parents and (iii) 60 Days Emergency Termination.

All three types are ticked by default. If selected the maternity leave type option becomes available to all female employees automatically without the need to assign the maternity benefit leave individually. D

Note: Maternity Benefit leaves are limited to female employees. Please make sure to complete the gender field when you onboard employees to ashima.

3. Allocation or transfer of Maternity Leave credits to the father or an alternative caregiver is called ACL in ashima. By default the ACL rule is enabled/ticked and set to a maximum of 7 days. . E

Note: ACL leaves are not assigned automatically. ACL leave needs to be created and configured after which it can be assigned to an eligible employee.

4. A default Maternity Leave Workflow Approver is provided at the start with the owner account as the approver. F

You can create a custom maternity leave workflow by clicking on the "CREATE NEW" Button if you want the approver to be different than the account owner. G

When creating a custom maternity leave workflow you can configure the following:

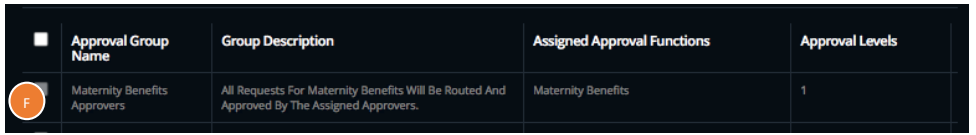

(i) approval group name H

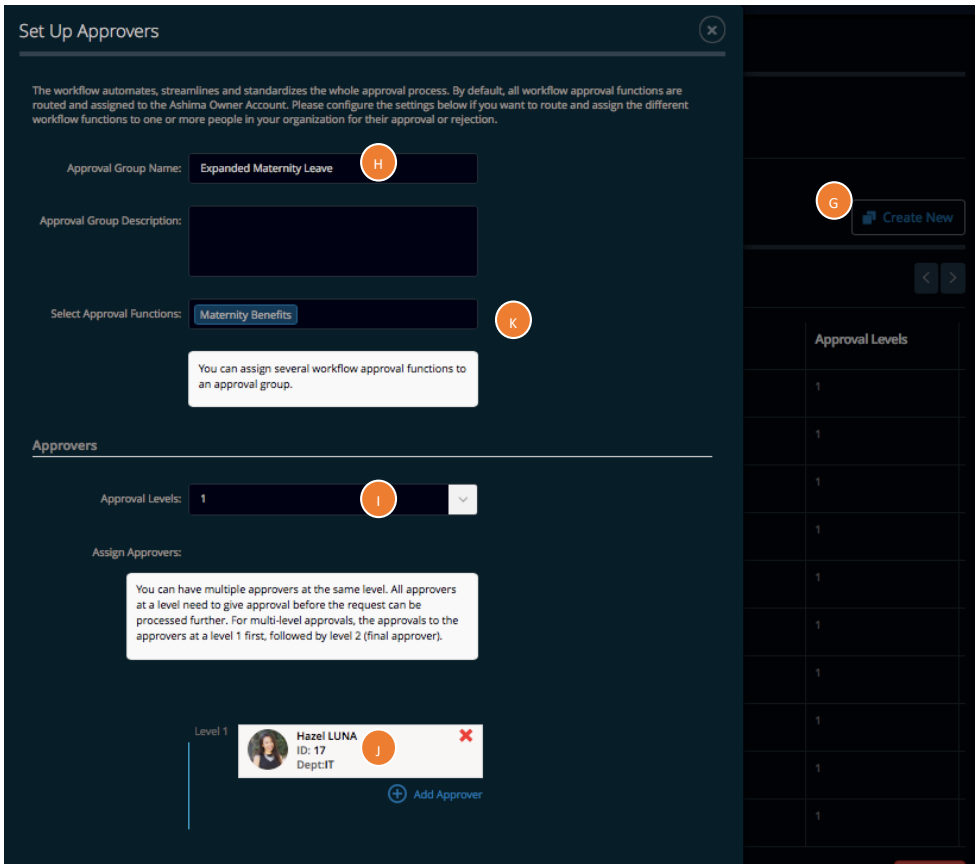

(ii) level of approvers I

(iii) assign approvers J

(iv) make sure to choose the "Maternity Benefits" on the approval function type. K

Note: If you created a custom maternity workflow make sure to assign this to all your female employees eligible for maternity leave otherwise the system will route requests to the default maternity leave approver.

Expanded Maternity Leave FAQ

1.) Do I need to assign maternity leave type to female employees?

No. The system will automatically enable maternity leave benefits (which is separate from other custom leave types that you need to assign) to all female employees.

2.) Why can't an employee see the maternity leave benefits tab/page nor the apply button on her employee portal?

Please check the gender assigned to the employee under her personal details. Only female employees have access to the maternity leave page on their portal

3.) What to do if an an employee encounters an error that she doesn't have enough SSS contribution to process her maternity leave application?

Maternity Leave calculation requires more than 12 mos. worth of previous SSS contribution. If your company is new to ashima or if the female employee was recently hired, you need to upload her previous SSS contributions first before she can apply for maternity leave benefits.

4.) What to do if an an employee encounters an error that she has an existing approved or pending leave while filling for her maternity leave

If there is an existing pending or approved leave (i.e appoved vacation leave) within the period of the employees maternity leave request she needs to cancel this to proceed with her maternity application.

5,) Will employee be included in the payroll while she is on maternity leave.

Yes. By default the employee will still be included in the payroll while on maternity leave.

Her maternity benefit equivalent pay will instead be displayed on her payslip in lieu of the regular basic pay. Her basic pay, other premium pay and other paid leaves will be disregarded by the system and will display with zero amount.

However if she has scheduled deminims, allowances, other earnings, loans, insurance, other deductions, etc. these will continue unless you stop it either by changing the status or changing the end date.

While on maternity leave she will not not be deducted her contribution counterpart, unless she specified on her application that she wishes to continue paying her contributions.

6.) Can I exclude an employee from payroll while on maternity

Yes, you may exclude employee from payroll while on maternity leave.

Because she is excluded from payroll she will not earn any scheduled earnings (i.e. deminimis, allowances, etc.). Her scheduled deductions (i,e, loans, insurance, etc) will alos be disregarded.

Note however, that If she opted in her application to continue paying contributions while on maternity leave the contribution amount has already been deducted from her maternity benefit and so she should not be excluded from payroll.

7.) Can an employee while on maternity opt to go back to work early?

Yes. In cases where the employee opts to go back to work earlier than the end date of her maternity leave, you can enable the maternity advance setting on early back to work and specify the effective date.

Enabling the early back to work rule will result to the following:

1. Employee can clock in and out , and her timeheets will be paid. She will earn her basic pay as well as other premium pay such as holidays, ot's nsd's, etc.

2. The employees shift will now be enforced even if her maternity leave period is still in effect.

3. Please note that for monthly paid employees who apply for early back to wok their pay calculation for the duration wherein the maternity leave period is still in effect will be calculated hourly.

4. Employees can also file for other paid leaves while the maternity period is still in effect

5. All other scheduled earnings and deductions will continue.

6. Contribution deduction is dependent if the employee during maternity application opted to continue paying her contributions.

8) Can the employee continue paying for her contributions while she is on maternity leave?

Yes,. Employee can continue paying however she needs to specify this by checking on the boxes "continue paying SSS, PHIC, HDMF on her leave application. Her employee contribution counterpart will be deducted from the total maternity benefit amount that will be released in advance by the company to the employee.

If she opts to continue paying, her payslip will display her contribution payments while she is on maternity.

9,) Can I assign Allocated Maternity Leave credits to any employee?

Yes., you can assign allocated maternity leave credits to any employee using the Alternative Caregiver Leave (ACL) type.

First you need to set up/configure your Alternative Caregiver Leave (ACL) allowing you to specify requirements such as lead time, maximum number of allocated leave credits, etc.

Once you have completed the set up you can then assign this leave to any employee.
